Decolonising Environmental Thought

a five day faculty development programme

Objective

This Faculty Development Programme aims to (re-)familiarise faculty with the ways in which the concept of decoloniality allows for a re- and deconstruction of the field of environmental humanities. Over the rigorous five-day schedule of lectures and workshops, noted scholars from prestigious institutes will address GSHSS faculty not only on the core concepts of decoloniality and environmental humanities, but also on various associated fields like ecofeminism, political ecology, symbolic geography, etc.

Resource Persons

- Professor Aditya Nigam, The Centre for the Study of Developing Societies
- Professor Pramod K. Nayar, University of Hyderabad
- Professor Dilip K. Das, The English & Foreign Languages University
- Professor Shruti Das, Berhampore University
- Dr. Sherin Sabu, Indian Institute of Technology Jodhpur
- Dr. Tonisha Guin, Indian Institute of Technology Jodhpur

Outcome

At the conclusion of this FDP, participants will be cognizant of one of the most significant contemporary schools of thought in interdisciplinary studies. They will be capable of deploying concepts of decoloniality and environmental thought in their research and pedagogical activities. Further, it will enable faculty to supervise topical theses and research scholars to better conceptualise arguments for their work.

Topics

The FDP will include twelve lectures and six interactive sessions. The topics to be dealt with over these sessions are:

- Decoloniality
- Ecofeminism
- Ecological Representation
- Environmental Humanities
- Political Ecology
- Symbolic Geography
